The Birth of 'Art De La Chute'

The genesis of Uchino's 'Art De La Chute' series can be traced back to his fascination with the enigmatic nature of dreams. Dreams, for Uchino, serve as a gateway to the subconscious mind, where the boundaries of rationality dissolve, and the imagination reigns supreme. Inspired by this ethereal realm, Uchino embarked on a journey to translate the essence of dreams onto canvas, giving birth to the 'Art De La Chute' series.

The title 'Art De La Chute' itself is a testament to Uchino's artistic vision. Chute in French translates to "fall" or "cascade," alluding to the artist's exploration of the subconscious mind and the fluidity of dreams. Through his paintings, Uchino invites viewers to embark on a visual pilgrimage, to delve into the depths of their own subconscious and uncover hidden layers of meaning.

Characteristics of 'Art De La Chute'

Female subjects play a central role in Uchino's paintings, often depicted as ethereal beings suspended in a state of reverie or contemplation. Their faces are devoid of distinct features, inviting viewers to project their own emotions and interpretations onto the canvas. The women in Uchino's paintings exude an air of mystery and vulnerability, inviting viewers to unravel their hidden stories.

The surrealist movement, with its emphasis on dreamlike imagery and the subconscious, has played a significant role in shaping his artistic vision. The works of renowned surrealists such as Salvador Dalí and René Magritte are evident in Uchino's paintings. However, Uchino's unique style distinguishes his work from his predecessors.
